ICP-2, originally adopted in 2001, sets out the criteria for recognizing and evaluating new Regional Internet Registries (RIRs). However, the Internet has changed significantly since then. The updated draft RIR Governance Document aims to reflect the Internet we have today, ensuring the principles for recognizing and governing RIRs remain clear, relevant, and effective.

This review is not about the daily operations of RIRs, but rather the broader governance principles that support a stable, transparent, and community-led Internet number registry system.

To ensure the revised document reflects current realities and community expectations, all five RIRs and ICANN undertook consultation processes to support the Number Resource Organization Number Council (NRO NC), which fulfils the role of the Address Supporting Organization Address Council (ASO AC), who were tasked by the NRO Executive Council (EC) to establish and manage a process to update ICP-2.
